DERBY CANDIDATES.

Last year before racing opened the more important 3-year-old events of the western turf, the Tennessee Derby at Memphis, Kentucky Derby, St. Louis Derby, Latonia Derby and Oakley Derby, were by common consent deemed to be at the mercy of two colts, Plaudit and Lieber Karl, and much partisanship was developed in the course of prolonged discussion of the relative merits of the two cracks. Plaudit decided the matter at Louisville and for the moment was hailed as an invincible. Pink Coat, Han d'Or, penalties and perhaps some slight declension of form, rudely tore away his crown subsequently, but in May, just after he had defeated Lieber Karl for the Clark Stakes, there was nothing in sight to dispute his apparent supremacy.

The situation is widely different this year. There is no recognized probable champion. Instead quite a band of Derby candidates are in view and looking over their varying fortunes as 2-year-olds it is difficult to assign any marked degree of superiority to any particular one. Of W. Overton, Manuel, Kentucky Colonel, Heliobas, Onomastus, The Kentuckian, Glenheim, Rhinelander, Corsini, The Barrister and Jolly Roger, who can say with confidence which will prove the best 3-year-old. All are in one or another of the western Derbys and most of them are in all. Some, as in the case of Heliobas, had short careers, stopped last year by disease or accident, others raced the season through with remarkable alternations of victory and defeat. Had W. Overton been retired directly after his brilliant performances at Washington Park, there is no doubt he would now be a prime public favorite, but his subsequent disastrous eastern campaign sadly discredited his mid-summer promise.

The table here presented shows in compact form the winning races of the young horses that will in advance of the opening of the coming racing season be generally thought to possess the best chances for carrying off western three-year-old honors. Of course there are others. Greatland, Corsini, His Lordship, Manlius, Ordnung and others that are highly thought of by their owners may presently occupy a higher position in public estimation but as a matter of "form" the probable winners of the three-year-old classics of the year are indicated in the table. It will repay study and comparison.

NOTES OF THE TURF.

This week's Racing Calendar announces stakes for the Washington Jockey Club. This disposes of the report that there would be no racing at the Benning track next spring. The usual list of stakes for the spring meeting at Morris Park is also announced in the same issue. The Metropolitan Handicap has $5,000 added this year. It was $3,000 last year. The increase will be appreciated by turfmen. Morris Park will offer a program of unusual liberality this year.

Report from New Orleans is to the effect that the little light-weight rider, Odom, has been engaged to ride for ex-Corporation Counsel W. H. Clark of New York. Maher will of course do the main riding for the stable but he has been rapidly gaining weight of late so the little fellow will come in handy for the feather-weight riding.

Last year's good performer, Goodrich, has been fired and turned out at Lexington. It is to be hoped this rarely good stayer will stand training in good shape in time to show the benighted easterners who think Ben Holladay the only good long distance horse left on earth the breadth and depth of their mistaken notions.
